I think I can learn a lot...and take knowledge back to the practice

Ashley Crews started the Certificate in October 2013 after deciding she wanted to take more knowledge of emergency work back to her practice. Ashley works at Highcroft Veterinary Referrals in Bristol; working alongside the practices ECC diplomat and a small team of nurses.

Ashley explains "I wanted to enrol on the Cert VN ECC training as I have always been interested in emergency cases and caring for animals on a one-to-one basis. I think I can learn a lot from this field and be able to take knowledge back to the practice to share with other members of our nursing team."

Because of her interest in emergency and critical care, Ashley has already undertaken a lot of ECC focussed CPD, so the Cert VN ECC seemed the next logical step for her. Ashley says: "From this course I hope to be able to understand more on the critical patient and special areas within the critical care elements. I am looking forward to the whole aspect of this training; I think it is a really special field to get into. Then once I have this qualification I can help others within the practice with my knowledge and also be able to help with critical care cases and have more of an understanding on what's going on/being done."
